What are the 4Ps of Marketing?

The 4Ps of marketing are a core part of the marketing mix:

- Product
- Price
- Place
- Promotion

Think of it as the foundation of your marketing strategy framework. Like the legs of a table, all four need to be balanced to support your business. This model helps businesses organize and communicate their value in a way that attracts and retains customers.

Think of it like baking a cake—each P is an essential ingredient for a successful result.

Breaking down the 4Ps Model

1. Product

What are you selling? This includes features, design, quality, packaging, and variations. What you sell, including features, quality, and benefits. This is your product strategy. Example: A bakery sells artisan sourdough bread with organic ingredients.

2. Price

How much will it cost? Includes pricing strategy, discounts, payment terms, and perceived value. What customers pay; affected by costs, competition, and value perception. This defines your pricing strategy. Example: Premium pricing positions the product as high-quality.

3. Place

Where and how is the product delivered to the customer? Includes physical stores, online, distribution partners, etc. Where and how the product is distributed and sold (online, retail, direct). This is your distribution strategy. Example: The bakery sells in-store and through local delivery apps.

4. Promotion

How will you communicate your offer? This includes advertising, email, social media, public relations, etc. How you communicate and promote your product (ads, SEO, social media, etc.). This is your promotional strategy. Example: Instagram campaigns, free samples, and referral programs.
